

THE VACUUM PROPOSAL

To: Gordon & Sonia

From: The Contamination Control team

Lead writer: Average Rob Morrison Enjoyer

Editor: Weakest Disciple of Sarrai Sensei

Artistic recreation of the level of thought and research that went into making this document

INTRODUCTION

This short proposal aims to persuade the readers on buying a portable vacuum cleaner to aid in our contamination control efforts. But why, you may ask? We already have a vacuum cleaner. Yes, while we might have a usable vacuum, the cord and the general lack of power outlets drastically limits our range of operation.

Hopefully by the end of this paper, you'll be convinced that the countless benefits of buying a cordless vacuum far outweighs the monetary cost of acquisition.¹

¹ Declaration of conflicting interests: This proposal is not sponsored by any vacuum company or affiliated with any party that stands to gain from a purchase of a portable vacuum cleaner.

DUSTY DANGER

We all know that inhaling dust is bad for you, but how bad is it really? Here are the cold, hard facts:

1 Respiratory Irritation

Dust particles can irritate your respiratory tract, leading to coughing, sneezing, and a runny or blocked nose.

2 Asthma Exacerbation

Dust exposure can trigger or worsen asthma symptoms, making it difficult to breathe and leading to more frequent attacks.

3 Reduction in Attractiveness

Having rusty, dusty rat hair reduces one's attractiveness according to scientists. Sheesh!

Source: ChatGPT

Now being confronted with these not so pleasant facts may make you feel sad, exasperated and emotionally drained. But don't worry, that's the normal emotional response and these feelings can be alleviated through a strategic investment into a good quality, cordless vacuum cleaner.

The biggest place where such a device could substantiate significant positive changes is in Binning: where the longer reach and vacuuming ability would make cleaning those cells dramatically easier than using a wet wipe.

Let's enable our contamination control experts to do their best by giving them the best tools that we can. That's the Finning way (I think, Stevie said our motto was to 'Work faster, not safer').

FINANCIAL INCENTIVES

Current Finning stock price without a portable vacuum cleaner:

Now here's analyst predictions for Finning stock with the addition of a cordless vacuum cleaner:

Estimated stock price: $120 (valuation 12x multiple of expected earnings)

Estimated annual Dividend: $30 (yield = 25%) [up from $1 currently]

Note: This is not financial advice: Please do not make investments in shares, options or other derivatives for FTT based on these facts. The predictions here may or may not come true.

WHAT WOULD GORDON RAMSAY SAY IF HE VISITED BINNING?

Gordon, channel your inner Ramsay and bring justice to Binning!!

Real footage of us if you don't buy a portable vacuum (we respect the decision but are mentally anguished)

Real footage of us if you do buy the vacuum!

THE END

Thank you for taking the time to read this very serious document. We know that you two are a man and woman of the people and would act accordingly to the best interest for the warehouse. Peace out!